ST. HELENA TO PARIS

THE REMOVAL OF NAPOLEON'S BODY TO ITS LAST RESTING PLACE.

Wonderful Preservation Through Nineteen Years' Internment—Spectators Moved to Tears—Impressive Ceremonies at the Church of the Invalides.

The grave in the valley of Napoleon, on St. Helena, as the place had come to be called, was surrounded by an iron railing set in a heavy stone curb. Over the grave was a covering of 6 inch stone which admitted to a vault 11 feet deep, 8 feet long and 4 feet 8 inches broad and was apparently filled with earth, but digging down some seven feet a layer of Roman cement was found. This broken laid bare a layer of rough hewn stone 10 inches thick and fastened together by iron clamps. It took 4½ hours to remove this layer. The stone up, the slab forming the lid of the interior sarcophagus was exposed, inclosed in a border of Roman cement strongly attached to the walls of the vault. So stoutly had all these various coverings been sealed with cement and bound by iron bands that it took the large party of workers ten hours to reach the coffin.

"The outermost coffin was slightly injured," says an eyewitness. "Then came one of lead, which was in good condition and inclosed two others—one of tin and one of wood. The last coffin was lined inside with white satin, which, having become detached by the effect of time, had fallen upon the body and enveloped it like a winding sheet and had become slightly attached to it."

It is difficult to describe with what anxiety and emotion those who were present waited for the moment which was to expose to them all that was left of the Emperor Napoleon. Notwithstanding the singular state of preservation of the tomb, and coffins, we could scarcely hope to find anything but some misshapen remains of the least perishable part of the costume to evidence the identity of the body. But when Dr. Guillard raised the sheet of satin, an indescribable feeling of surprise and affection was expressed by the spectators, many of whom burst into tears. The emperor himself was before their eyes. The features of the face, though changed, were perfectly recognized; the hands extremely beautiful; his well known costume had suffered but little, and the colors were easily distinguished. The attitude itself was full of ease, and but for the fragments of satin lining which covered, as with fine gauze, several parts of the uniform, we might have believed we still saw Napoleon lying on his bed of state.

The climax of the pageant in Paris was the temple of the Invalides. The spacious church was draped in the most magnificent and lavish fashion and adorned with a perfect bewildering of imperial emblems. The light was shut out by hangings of violet velvet; tripods blazing with colored flames, and thousands upon thousands of waxen candles in brilliant candelabra lighted the temple. Under the dome, in the place of the altar, stood the catafalque which was to receive the coffin.

It was 3 o'clock in the afternoon when the archbishop of Paris, preceded by a splendid cross bearer, and followed by 16 incense boys and long rows of white clad priests, left the church to meet the procession. They returned soon. Following them was the Prince de Joinville and a select few from the grand cortege without. In their midst Napoleon's coffin.

The king descended from his throne and advanced to meet the cortege. "Sire," said the Prince de Joinville, "I present to you the body of Napoleon, which, in accordance with your commands, I have brought back to France."

"I receive it in the name of France," replied Louis Philippe.

Such at least is what the "Moniteur" affirms was said. The Prince de Joinville gives a different version: "It appears that a little speech which I was to have delivered when I met my father, and also the answer he was to give me, had been drawn up in council, only the authorities had omitted to inform me concerning it. So when I arrived I simply saluted with my sword, and then stood aside. I saw indeed that this silent salute, followed by retreat, had thrown something out, but my father, after a moment's hesitation, improvised some appropriate sentence, and the matter was afterward arranged in the 'Moniteur'."

Beside the king stood an officer, bearing a cushion. On it lay the sword of Ansterlitz. Marshal Soult handed it to the king, who, turning to Bertrand, said: "General, I commission you to place the emperor's glorious sword on the bier."

And Bertrand, trembling with emotion, laid the sword reverently on his idol's coffin. The great audience watched the scene in deepest silence. The only sound which broke the stillness was the half stifled sobs of the gray haired soldiers of the Invalides, who stood in places of honor near the catafalque.

The king and the procession returned to their palaces, and then followed a majestic funeral mass.—Ida M. Tarbell in McClure's Magazine.

The Chief End of Man.

Mr. Cuyler tells the story of a little boy, the son of good Presbyterian parents, who was asked the question in the catechism, "What is the chief end of man?" and answered it:

"Man's chief end is to glorify God and annoy him forever."

"There are too many men," says Dr. Cuyler, "who act as if that were their chief end."—Ram's Horn.

England was so called because the dominant tribe of Saxons who conquered it were called the "Angles," or "Engles."

The Wife of Governor Brown Dead.

BALTIMORE, May 11.—Mrs. Frank Brown, wife of Governor Brown, died this morning at 8:45. Mrs. Brown's maiden name was Mary Ridgely, her father being David Ridgely, of this city. She was married twice, her first husband, whom she wedded in her twentieth year, having been the late Horatio W. Preston, of Boston. He was a number of years her senior and died within a year, leaving her a large fortune. A year later she met Frank Brown, who had always been one of her admirers, and they were married in December, 79. The couple had two children. Mrs. Brown was known to all Baltimore society people as a most agreeable hostess. She had always been ready with her purse to relieve the suffering.

Cold Snap in the Northwest.

SIOUX CITY, Ia., May 11.—Dispatches from points in Iowa, South Dakota and Nebraska report from last night that grain and fruit trees in bloom appear to have suffered the greatest damage. Corn and other grains were only very slightly damaged. In the Black Hills, in South Dakota, four inches of snow fell. Water is reported to have frozen at Jefferson, Iowa. Conditions are favorable for more frost to-night.

Died Like a Coward.

LOUIS, May 11.—James Murray, colored, who was convicted with his brother of the murder of Edgar Fitz Williams, on the Midland suburban line September 23, 1893, committed for the purpose of robbery, was hanged at Clayton, St. Louis county, at 6:55 this morning. He went to the gallows like a craven and maintained his innocence to the last. Ed. Murray was hanged at Hermann, Mo., for the same crime and confessed his guilt, dying bravely.

The North Carolina Collectors.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Mr. John S. Henderson, of Salisbury, N. C. and Mr. Charles N. Vance, of Black Mountain, N. C., have each filed an application at the Treasury Department for appointment of collector of internal revenue for the Sixth district of North Carolina to succeed Mr. Carter deceased. Mr. Kope Elias is a strong candidate for the office, but his papers have not been put on file as yet. It is expected that the matter will be settled soon.

Stories of Colored Mob Denied.

LINCOLN, Ky., May 11.—Stories sent out last night of alleged mobs of colored people bound for Midway to have revenge on William Shipp, acquitted last night of the murder of Sam Brown are absolutely unfounded. The colored people naturally deplore the verdict, but their expressions of indignation are mild compared with the denunciation of the jury by white citizens of all classes.

THE DISPENSARY INJUNCTION.

South Carolina Will Make a Test Case of Constable Beach.

CHARLESTON, S. C., May 11.—Dispensary Constable Beach seized two gallons of liquor in the hands of L. R. Byrd. The latter had just taken it from the express office and made affidavit that it was imported from Savannah. Immediately afterwards Beach was brought before United States Judge Simonton, who issued a rule ordering him to show cause why he should not be punished for contempt of court in violating the injunction issued by him against dispensary constables interfering with imported liquors and so infringing the interstate commerce statutes.

At 3 o'clock the case was heard and on motion of B. A. Haygood, Byrd's attorney, Beach was fined $300. He declined to pay and was sent to jail. It is understood that the State authorities will institute habeas corpus proceedings in the United States Supreme Court for Beach's release, making the affair a test case in the hope of having the injunction dissolved.

Beauties and Profit in Advertising.

Maj. Moses P. Handy tells of a business concern with a nominal capital of $100,000, only $30,000 of it paid in, that has divided in a single year among three partners profits to the amount of $750,000, and that exclusive of salaries of $50,000 and $35,000 drawn by two members of the firm. Ten years ago one of these partners was a drug clerk on a small salary in a Western town, and is now one of the millionaires of New York. "Without newspaper advertising I might have made a living," he said, "but it was advertising that made me rich, and advertising a very simple commodity at that." Another concern which began by investing $10,000 a year in newspaper advertising, increased the amount every year according to their increase in business, and this year expects to spend $1,000,000. These are only specimen bricks of the enormous profits realized from shrewd newspaper advertising.—Boston Herald.

The Coming Conference.

In Roanoke next Wednesday there will be gathered together a large body of representative men to formulate plans and to discuss the long-talked-of constitutional convention. If conducted in the proper way much good can be accomplished, which will be of benefit to every citizen of the commonwealth. And who can say that it will not be conducted as it should? Let every man that can, attend this meeting next Wednesday, and in this way lend his influence to a good cause. The railroads will give reduced rates, and if possible let the meeting be largely attended, so that the interests of every section can be represented and protected as may be necessary. We expect to attend, and hope to meet others from this section.—Buchanan Banner.

ANY one who has ever had an attack of inflammatory rheumatism will rejoice with Mr. J. A. Stumm, 220 Boyle Heights, Los Angeles, over his fortunate escape from a siege of that distressing ailment. Mr. Stumm is foreman of Morriam's confectionary establishment. Some months ago, on leaving the heated work room to run across the street on an errand he was caught out in the rain. The result was that when ready to go home that night he was unable to walk, owing to inflammatory rheumatism. He was taken home, and on arrival was placed in front of a good fire and thoroughly rubbed with Chamberlain's Pain Balm. During the evening and night he was repeatedly bathed with this liniment, and by morning was relieved of all rheumatic pains. He now takes especial pleasure in praising Chamberlain's Pain Balm, and always keeps a bottle of it in the house. For sale by Charles Lyle Drug Company.
